FOREWORD

PAT SUMMITT

Pat Summitt (Tennessee Lady Vols) was one of basketball's greatest coaches and contributors. Known for her grit, tenacity and amazing "Basketball IQ," Pat earned more awards than this page has space to fill. Her teams never missed an NCAA tournament. She was "Coach of the Year" numerous times. From the Arthur Ashe Courage Award, the Presidential Medal of Freedom, induction in both The Women's Basketball Hall of Fame and the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame and more, Pat Summitt coached 8 national Championship teams, had 1098 victories and in 38 years of coaching, she never had a losing season. The NCAA, Sporting News and the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame all named her "Coach of the Century."

Join us as we take a journey through Coach Pat Summitt's archives and share some of the strategies she used to develop strong players, championship teams and an overall mastery of the game in "Mastering Special Situations."

PLAY 1

PRESSURE BREAK

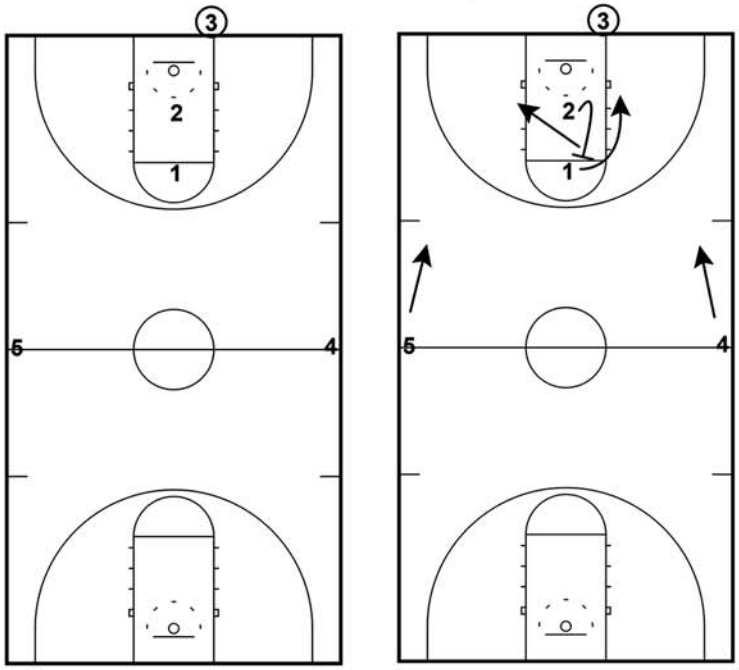

OVERVIEW

With multiple player options available, this play can be used as a quick option for inbounding the ball against a press.

KEY PERSONNEL

2 Guard: The screen set at the beginning of this play will set the pace for everything that follows.

Frame 1 Frame 2

PLAY OVERVIEW

Play Begins in a 1-1-2 Setup with the 3 man set up to throw an inbound pass. Frame 1

PLAY INSTRUCTIONS

Upon initiation of the play, the 2 guard immediately turns to set a screen for the point guard. The point guard uses the screen to get open. Frame 2

2 guard rolls to become the second inbound option. Frame 2

Players at half-court move up to become 3rd and 4th passing options. Frame 2

COACHING POINTS

If defense is strictly man to man, then other players clear out and the guard will bring the ball up. If the defense steps up into a press, the players (at half-court) become options and release at the appropriate time.

PLAY 2

SPECIAL

OVERVIEW

This play provides a long pass option that can lead to a lay-up against full-court pressure.

KEY PERSONNEL

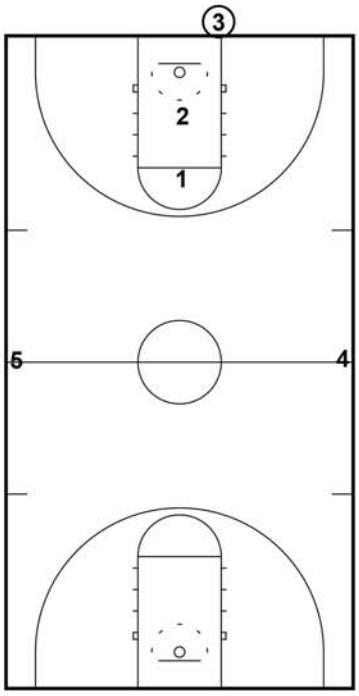

The player at position 2 should be your fastest player, and a believable option when they sprint towards the basket.

PLAY OVERVIEW

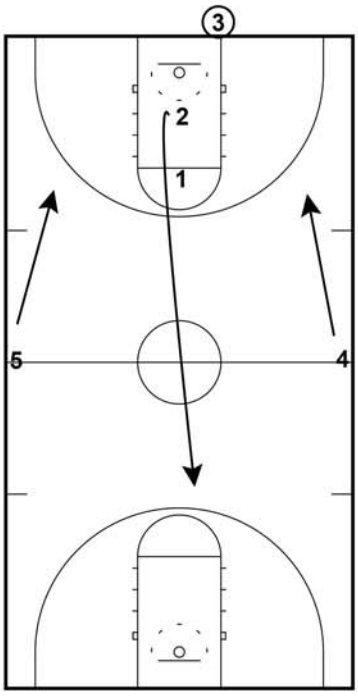

Play begins in a 1-1-2 setup.

PLAY INSTRUCTIONS

1. Upon initiation of the play, the 2 guard immediately turns as if setting a screen for the 1.
2. Instead the 2 will slip around 1 and sprint down the court as a viable passing option for a quick layup.
3. Both offensive players stationed at half-court will move up towards the inbound player as passing options as this action happens.
4. Ball is inbounded and players off the ball move as relief passing options.

Frame 1

Frame 2

COACHING POINTS

Place your strongest passer as the inbounder. They have to be able to make the long pass consistently if necessary.

PLAY 3

SPECIAL HOLD

OVERVIEW

This play is designed to help players mitigate full-court pressure and safely bring the ball up court.

KEY PERSONNEL

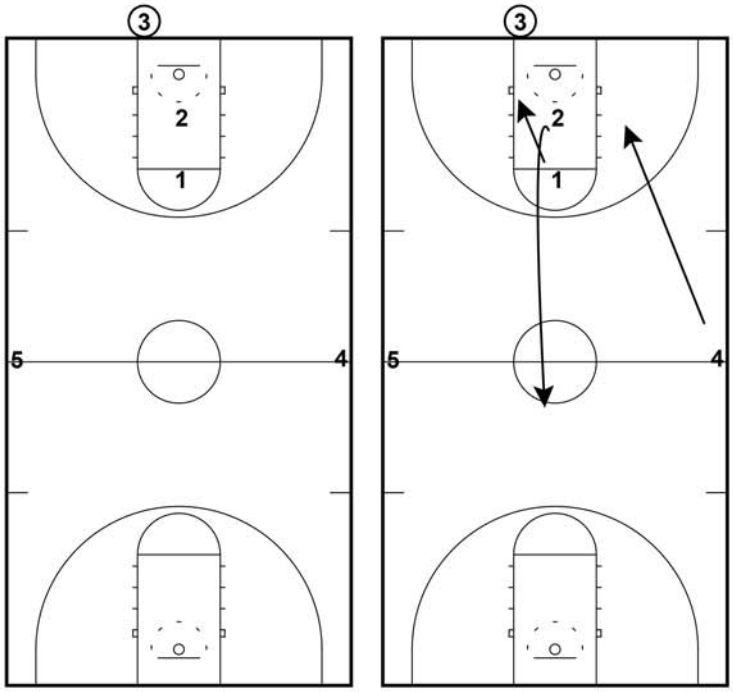

The player at position 2 should be your fastest player and a believable option when they sprint towards the basket.

PLAY OVERVIEW

Play begins in a 1-1-2 setup with the 3 man set up to throw an inbound pass.

PLAY INSTRUCTIONS

1. 2 curls and sprints towards the basket drawing away the defense and creating a passing option.
2. 1 moves up as a passing option.
3. 4 moves up from half-court as a passing option.
4. The ball is inbounded and pushed up court.

Frame 1 Frame 2

COACHING POINTS

When dealing with full-court pressure it's important that players maintain the correct spacing and provide relief as passing options while the ball is moved up the floor.

PLAY 4

BOX PRESS BREAK OPTION 1

OVERVIEW

This play is designed to help players mitigate full-court pressure and safely bring the ball up court while creating multiple, reliable passing lanes.

KEY PERSONNEL

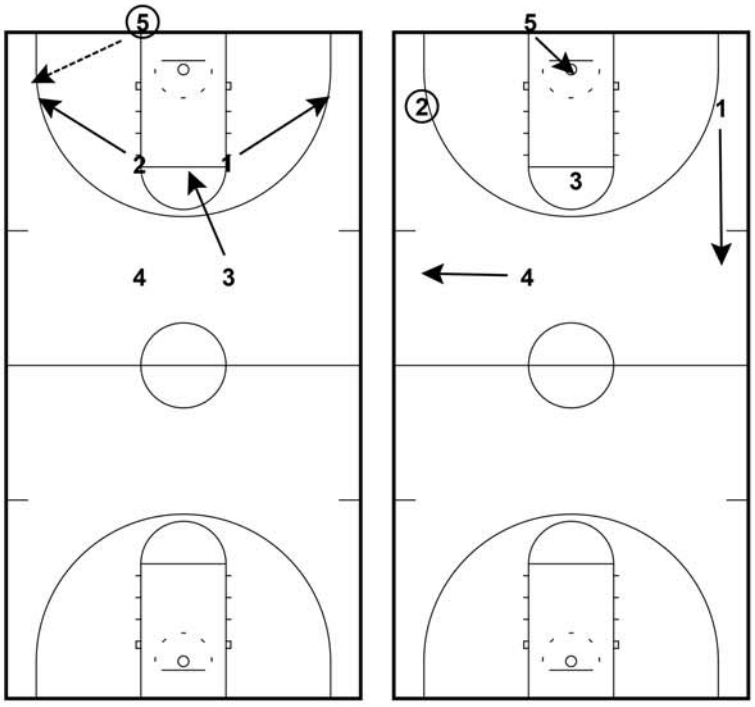

The inbounding player stays just behind the action, becoming a relief passing option. Player at positions 1 and 4 are crucial to creating the diagonal and sideline passing lanes and maintaining the structural integrity of the play.

PLAY OVERVIEW

Play begins in a 1-2-2 Setup.

PLAY INSTRUCTIONS

1. Players at positions 1 and 2 move towards the wings.
2. Player at position 3 fills the space left by that action.
3. Ball is inbounded to 2 on the right side.
4. 5 becomes the middle relief option and maintains this spacing until the ball crosses half-court.
5. 1 uses the sideline to line up with 3 and 2 in a diagonal fashion.
6. 4 moves to the sideline becoming a viable sideline passing option.

Frame 1

Frame 2

COACHING POINTS

Encourage your players to be aware of the sideline, middle, and diagonal passing options created by this press break action. By maintaining the correct spacing, and moving together off the ball, these options will always be available.

PLAY 5

BOX PRESS BREAK OPTION 2

OVERVIEW

This play is designed to help players mitigate full-court pressure and safely bring the ball up court while creating multiple, reliable passing lanes.

KEY PERSONNEL

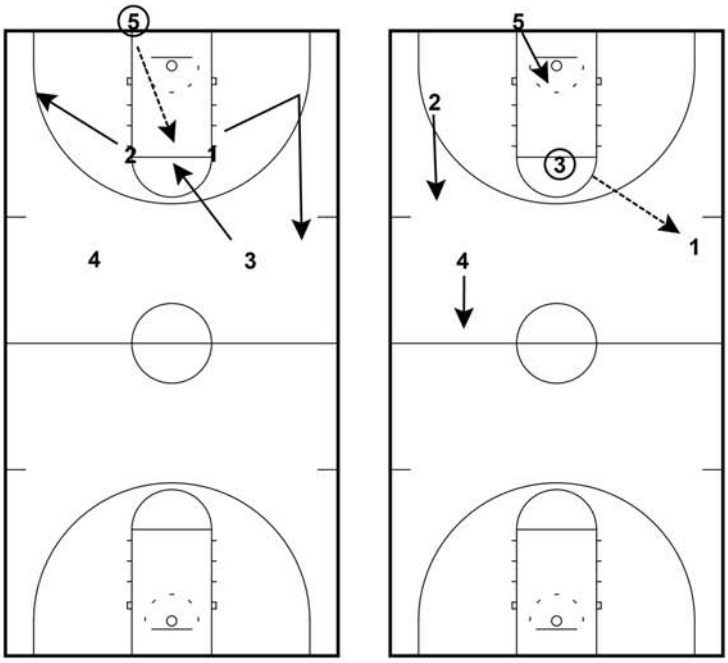

The inbounding player stays just behind the action, Player at position 3 must make a judgement call after receiving the ball on when to make the diagonal pass to 1.

PLAY OVERVIEW

Play begins in a 1-2-2 setup.

PLAY INSTRUCTIONS

1. 2 breaks wide left, 1 breaks wide right.
2. 3 fills the gap in the middle of the floor and 1 turns to sprint sideline.
3. The ball is inbounded to 3.
4. 3 turns to pass diagonally to 1.

Frame 1 Frame 2

COACHING POINTS

With the ball in the forward sideline position and under pressure it can be easy to make the mistake of a back-court violation. Once the ball crosses half-court, make sure all other players cross with a sense of urgency.

PLAY 6

BOX PRESS BREAK OPTION3

OVERVIEW

This play is designed to help players mitigate full-court pressure and safely bring the ball up court while creating multiple, reliable passing lanes. Gives more flexibility as the middle player can become a sideline option or maintain the diagonal passing lane.

KEY PERSONNEL

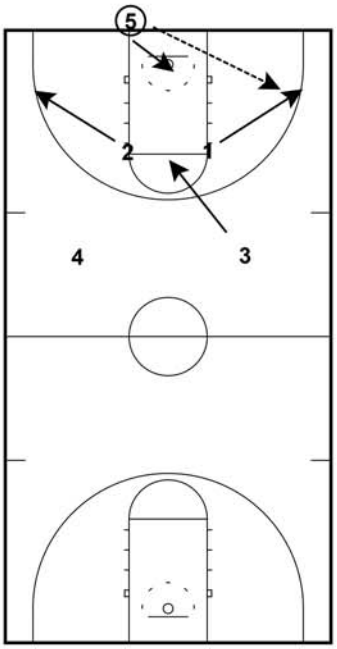

The inbounding player stays just behind the action, becoming a relief passing option. The middle player at position 3 will make a judgement call on whether to shift to the sideline or remain middle (which would change the play).

PLAY OVERVIEW

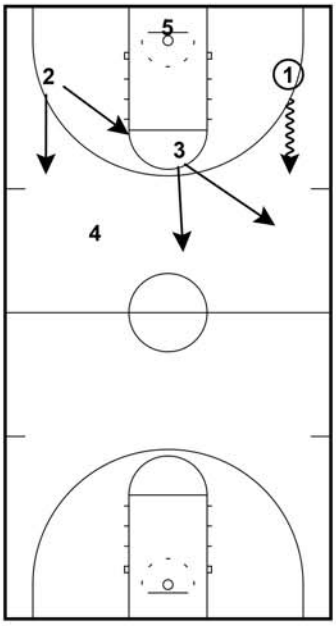

Play Begins in a 1-2-2 setup.

PLAY INSTRUCTIONS

1. 2 breaks wide left, 1 breaks wide right.
2. 3 fills the gap in the middle of the floor and 1 receives the inbound pass.
3. 1 dribbles down the sideline.
4. 3 will either fill the sideline passing lane or set the pace for both 3 and 2 to continue to maintain diagonal passing lanes.

Frame 1

Frame 2

COACHING POINTS

Encourage your players to be aware of the sideline, middle, and diagonal passing options created by this press break action. By maintaining the correct spacing, and moving together off the ball, these options will always be available.

STAY COOL UNDER PRESSURE

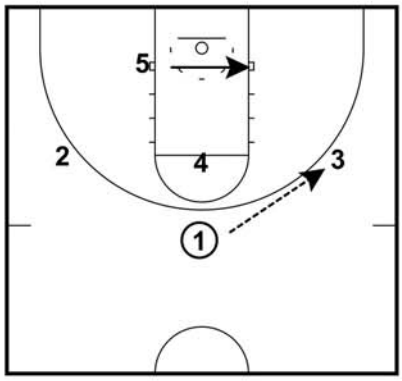

Have you ever experienced a team, after a timeout, changing their defense and moving to trap the first pass? While you as a coach may know what to do, do you practice it? Do your players know what you want them to do when somebody traps the first pass or double teams the point guard? Teams change defenses for many different reasons, but the point is to keep your players off balance and it's something that we see happen quite a bit

PRACTICE IS ESSENTIAL

Now you've called a play during a timeout and your players are returning to a different defensive setup. As a coach you could decide to stay in the offense you called, or leverage automatic zone and man options you should have in place for when, not if, the defense changes. If we're in the flow of the game and the opposing team changes on makes and misses and we don't pick that up early we may end up running the wrong offense. Don't wait until the middle of the game to decide you need a plan. Practice daily how to run your offense against changing defenses.

RESPONDING TO A CHANGING DEFENSE

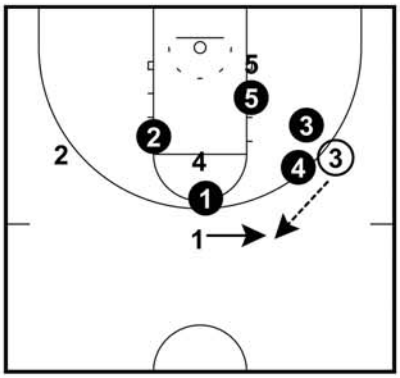

One thing we see often is teams switching their defense in order to trap on the first pass, especially after timeouts. Let's take a look at how, through a 1-3-1 offensive set, you can teach your players how to respond to a changing defensive situation and core rules to follow when they are under pressure.

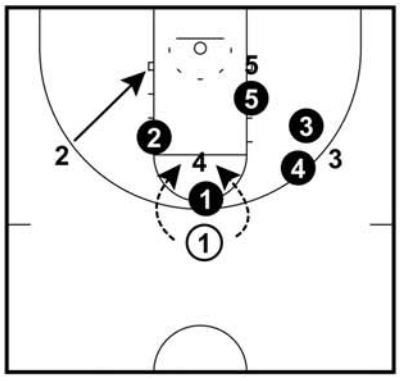

- We can run our 1-3-1 offensive set against both man and zone.
- Our point guards starts this set by passing the ball to the right wing.

Expect the trap, and make the initial pass to the player comfortable with that type of pressure

- When the trap comes as expected, then 5 can rotate to the ball-side block and if there is heavy coverage, shift out further in order to become a viable option.
- If this look is not there then we have to clear enough space to reverse the ball.

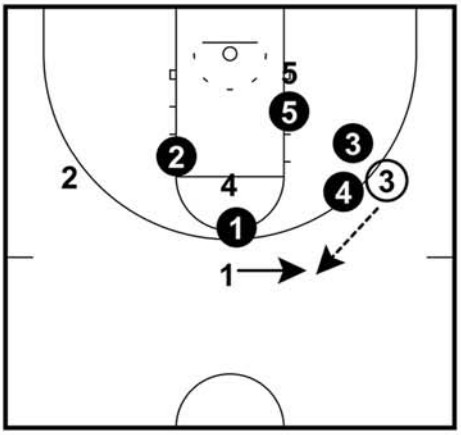

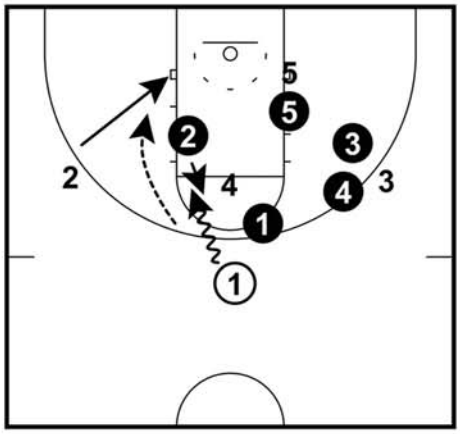

Once the ball is reversed we look in to the high-post and try to get the ball center, then our 2 cuts toward the basket for an easy layup or to be in position for an offensive rebound if our high-post decides to take the shot.

BEATING THE TRAP

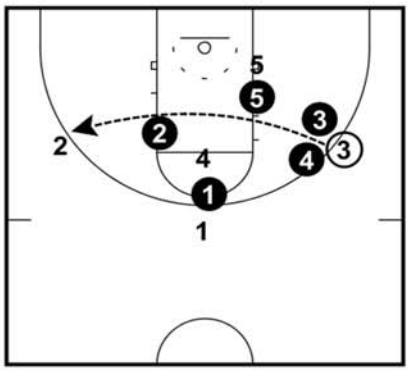

Noticing a pattern? We must “look in”, and then “look opposite” at all times. If we can get the ball center, the integrity of the defense breaks down. It’s common with this type of trap for the player furthest from the ball to be open. Being vocal will ensure that your players can capitalize on this opportunity with a quick shot. Move without the ball!!

Alternatively, your point guard can attack and force the defense to help freeing up that same player on the wing to cut and score.

If they deny the ball reversal to the point guard, they leave a huge gap for our player opposite the ball. Make the skip pass.

Whether we pass or dribble center we force a situation where they cannot cover and create easy scoring opportunities by nature of attacking to score. If they change to mitigate this, we have the option of using our post. If players "look in" first and nothing is available, look opposite, then we can move the ball and our players into scoring situations. Always move the ball and your offense in a meaningful way.

A PLAYER IS OPEN SOMEWHERE

If you have a great post player, it's quite likely that you've encountered the low-post double team. A low-post double team is when two defensive players converge on a post player in the paint when they receive a pass. Regardless of whether the trap comes from the weak side defensive post player or a defensive perimeter player, it can be quite frustrating and limiting to production in the paint, but, it doesn't have to be.

The low-post double team is a defensive measure for which you need an effective counter, and effective counters don't appear for the first time in the middle of a game scenario, they are developed in daily practice. What we ended up with instead of a series of plays, was a set of rules through which players understood their role and best floor placement when a double team occurred. This eased the probability of knee-jerk reactions from our post players because they knew where their teammates would be and where to look for help.

In actuality the low-post double team, like other double teams, give other players opportunities to get open. Let's take a look at how we counter this special situation.

HOW TO PLAY AGAINST THE LOW-POST DOUBLE TEAM

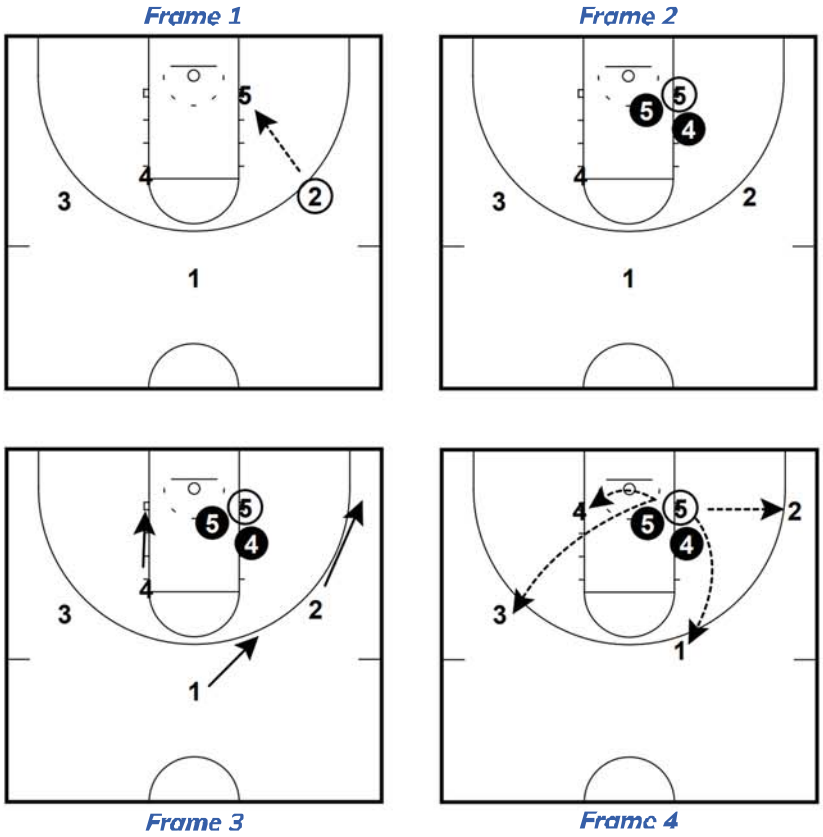

Anytime the post gets trapped on the block, we want . . .

- A shooter in the corner
- A guard on the out-pass
- The opposite post heading toward the basket
- The weakside wing player diagonally spotting up

Can the defense cover all this on the double team . . Absolutely not!

Now we should always work with our post players so that they are confident in catching and scoring, but it's been my experience that the trap occurs on the pass. While we work on their scoring ability, we have to give the same attention to developing their ability to make strong passes out of the double team.

Here is how your players should shift in the event of a low-post double team.

DISMANTALING A 'JUNK' DEFENSE

Does your team have a single dominant player, for example, one player that scores a majority of the team's points or sets up nice assists?

When teams come across this dynamic, sometimes they'll implement what's called a box-and-one defense, as it's the perfect junk defense to make you adjust your entire offensive strategy.

Quick Note: For those who aren't familiar with the term, a 'junk defense' is a defense that combines man-to-man and zone principles together.

The defense involves one defender (the chaser) playing man-to-man defense on the opposition's best offensive threat while the other four defenders set up in a box formation and play zone.

The main objective is to disrupt and confuse the opposition by giving them a different type of defensive pressure and causing confusion.

Luckily, I've got a few ways to help you beat this junk defense.

We use our stack offense at times when we want to get a player that's being face-guarded or denied the ball due to the box and one and we're not sure about what defense they are in. Our stack offense can be run against man or zone and gives us better rebounding position.

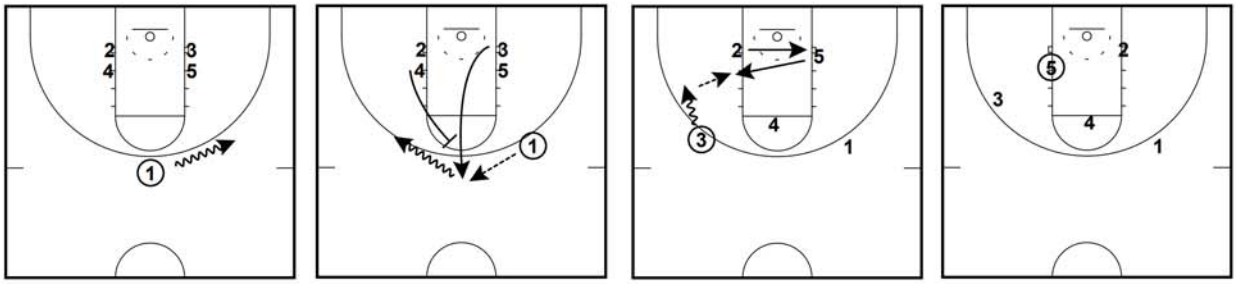

BEATING THE BOX-AND-ONE

Since we're discussing special situations and responding to different scenarios, what's really important is teaching your players not to stop their dribble. It's really easy to end up going though the motions and sometimes players stop their dribble prematurely in anticipation of the play which actually makes it harder to execute. When you can't move, the defense can relax and apply more pressure which makes everything more difficult.

The following stack options will work against any defense (man, zone, and even a Box & 1 or Triangle & 2)

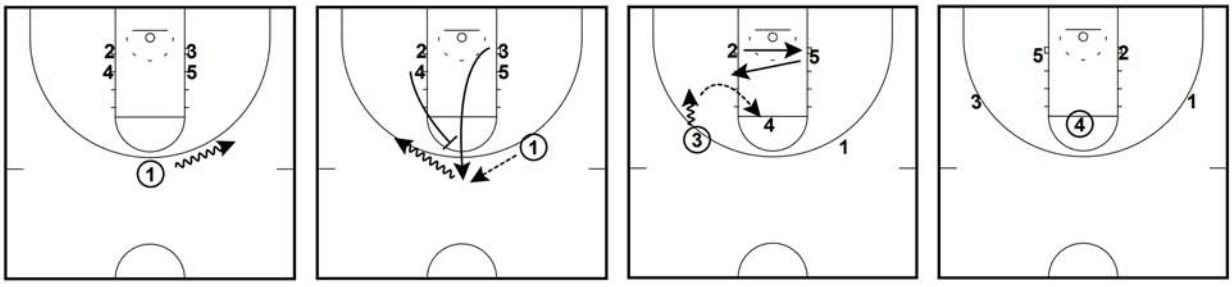

STACK OFFENSE OPTION 1

Hit 5 for a post-up

STACK OFFENSE OPTION 2

Hit 4 for a mid-range jump-shot

BEATING THE BOX-AND-ONE

In practice, you should work against Triangle-and-Two and Box-and-One on a regular basis. If we want wing entry for any play action, and our wing player is denied, our basic rule is

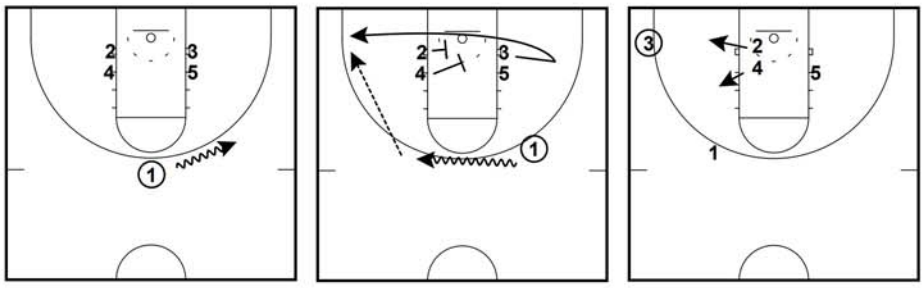

- The ball-handler drives straight at the rear of the defense
- This tells the denied player to back-cut

Never ever fake a back door cut, make it!

This takes away the indecision that can happen during the midst of changing defensive situations.

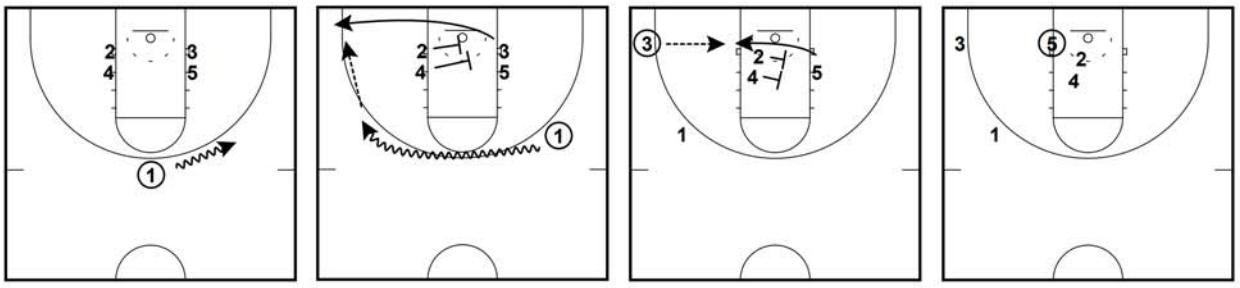

Here's a version of stack that leads to an easy short corner shot that we encountered vs BYU.

STACK OFFENSE OPTION 3 BYU OPTION

STACK OFFENSE OPTION 4

Hit 5 for a lay-up

PLAY 1

UNDER BASKET PLAY #1

OVERVIEW

Inbound play with box setup that creates 2 low-post options

KEY PERSONNEL

Players at the 4 and 5 must seal their defenders and create space in the low-post to receive the inbound pass. Player at position 2 should be your best shooter as a third safety option.

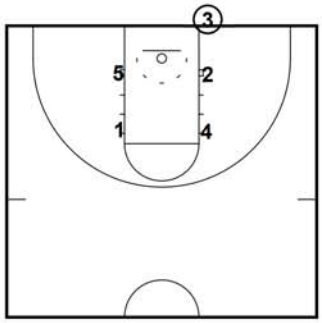

SETUP

Players setup in a box formation. Frame 1

PLAY INSTRUCTIONS

1. Player at position 2 breaks hard to the 3pt line. Frame 2
2. Post player at position 5 steps in sealing the inbound defender looking for the short pass. At the same time the player at position 4 will move underneath the basket and seal their defender looking for the short pass. Frame 3
3. Inbound passer makes pass to player option 4 or 5. If the inbound passer cannot make the short pass to player options 4 and 5 then the player at 1 will shift and receive the inbound pass or pass to 2 for a quick 3pt shot.

   Player at position 3 inbounds then curls around the action Frame 4

Frame 1

Frame 2

Frame 3

Frame 4

COACHING POINTS

This play works well against both "man to man" and "zone".

PLAY 2

UNDER BASKET PLAY #2

OVERVIEW

Quick inbound play with box setup that creates strong low-post and mid-range options.

KEY PERSONNEL

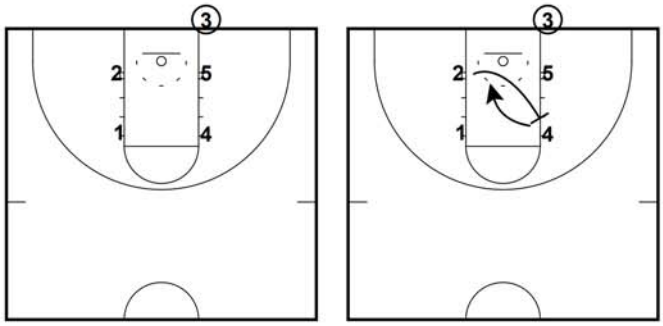

Player at position 2 should be your best shooter.
Player at position 5 should be your strongest post player.

SETUP

Setup in box formation. Frame 1

PLAY INSTRUCTIONS

1. 2 Sets a screen for 4 allowing them an open lane to receive a quick inbound pass. Frame 2
2. 5 turns to set a quick screen for 2 and 2 moves outside. First passing option is 4 for the layup, second is 2 for the quick shot. Frame 3
3. Immediately after setting the screen, 5 rolls back towards the basket. Frame 4
4. The Inbound pass is made to 2 for the shot, 5 for the low post option or out to the 1 as the safety option.

Frame 1

Frame 2

Frame 3

Frame 4

COACHING POINTS

This play works well against both "man to man" and "zone".

PLAY 3

UNDER BASKET PLAY #3

OVERVIEW

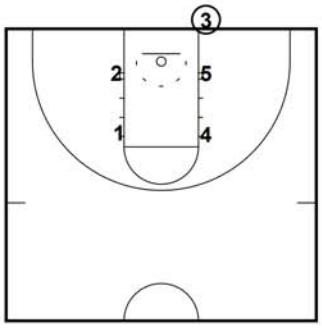

Quick inbound play freeing up your best shooter for a mid-range game/quarter closer.

KEY PERSONNEL

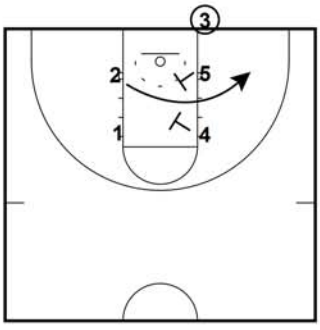

Player at position 2 is your best shooter.

SETUP

Setup in 1-4 Formation. Player at position 2 should be your best outside shooter. Player at position 5 should be your best post option. Frame 1

Frame 1

Frame 2

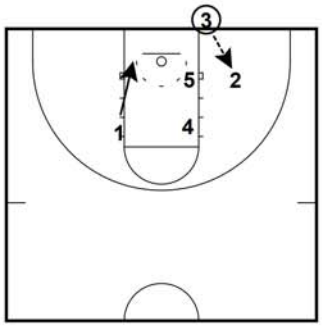

PLAY INSTRUCTIONS

1. 2 Player fakes setting a backscreen near the free-throw line.

   5 and 4 set strong screens but allow 2 to slip through. Frame 2

2. Player at position 1 moves down while calling for the ball becoming the 2nd passing option. After setting the screen, 5 is the third option for a score. Frame 3

3. The first option is for the player at position 2 to take the shot. Frame 4

Frame 3

Frame 4

COACHING POINTS

Encourage your players at 4 and 5 to run a "pincer" like action when setting their screens allowing just enough room for the shooter to get through.

PLAY 4

15 SECONDS

OVERVIEW

Play with dribble entry setup to create high-post and mid-range/long-range opportunities for your best shooters.

KEY PERSONNEL

4 is your best screener and able to hit the high mid-range jumpshot.
2 is your best shooter.

SETUP

Begin in box formation (Dribble Entry) Frame 1

PLAY INSTRUCTIONS

1. 2 breaks wide faking the passing option.
   4 also breaks wide.

   1 dribbles left. 2 moves up and through the middle. Frame 2

2. 4 sets strong screen for 2.
   2 uses the screen to get open. Frame 3

3. 1 can skip pass to 2 on the wing.
   1 also has the mid-range passing option for 4. Frame 4

Frame 1

Frame 2

Frame 3

Frame 4

COACHING POINTS

If 2 does not receive the pass and 4 is overplayed by the defender, encourage them to cut back towards the basket and draw the foul on a layup attempt. 3 and 5 should recognize that 2 and 4 are denied, and space out to give them a lane to back-cut.
