

Lesson 6: The Power of Eye Contact

Michelle Marciniak

Pat was a great communicator. She was very strict, very stern. She wanted you to keep eye contact 24/7. If you looked away when she was talking to you, she would literally follow your eyes.

Pat was an incredible communicator. She definitely knew how to get the best out of her players.

So, what I learned from Pat:

I think eye contact. Really, you get the feel for what people are thinking, why they're thinking it. So I think that's critical.

Definitely, as an entrepreneur, try to maintain as much eye contact as possible, whether you're being interviewed or in an interview. That eye contact displays confidence. It displays like I'm here in this room and I mean something. And there's some kind of power in eye contact.
