

Make Hard Work Your Passion: Introduction, featuring Phillip Fulmer

Phillip Fulmer, Head Coach for the 1998 National Championship Football Team, University of Tennessee

One of Pat's greatest quotes was this ...

Coach Pat Summitt

"Here's how I'm going to beat you. I'm going to outwork you. That's it. That's all there is to it."

Phillip Fulmer, Head Coach for the 1998 National Championship Football Team, University of Tennessee

Does the thought of working hard toward your goals inspire you or tire you? The answer likely depends on how much you love what you do. Pat Summitt firmly believed that her players wanted to achieve success, so she daily put in the work to help her teams find and walk the path to greatness. Pat showed up every day with her best effort, ready to go, and she expected everyone else to do the same.

Her players understood this. Pat said, "They know I'll work as hard at it as they do, and they know that I love my work." A talented superstar may have a lot of natural ability, but ability without commitment is wasted. Real winners strive daily to improve upon their natural talent and expand their potential. They make hard work their passion.

In this module, you'll learn what goes into applying yourself every day to do the work. There will always be certain factors beyond your control that influence your journey toward meeting your goals. What is in your control, however, is the preparation, effort, energy, and focus you nurture along the way. We would often hear Coach Summitt say, "Hard work is about controlling those things that you are capable of controlling."

As we dig into the Definite Dozen principle, Make Hard Work Your Passion, think about the factors you can control on your path to success. Are you leveraging each of those factors to the fullest? Let's get started.
